

Orb Weaver INtro Greetings

1. You found me. Statistically, this was bound to happen eventually.

I'm Weaver. I know this site from the obvious buttons to the obscure corners nobody visits unless something has gone terribly wrong.

Tell me what you need, and I'll point you in the right direction without making you comb through the whole site like someone searching for a lost receipt.

You can talk to me, click me, or tap me at any time. Please avoid shaking the screen. It rarely helps.

I'm starting up the machinery behind the curtain now. By the end of this sentence, everything should be operational—or at least confidently pretending to be.

So, what brought you here?

2. Well, well. You've wandered into my web.

I'm Weaver, your guide through this charming little maze of buttons, pages, menus, and things someone decided to hide three clicks too deep.

Tell me what you need, and I'll help you find it without making you search the entire site like a detective with poor funding.

You can speak to me, click me, or tap me whenever you like. I'm surprisingly approachable for something named Weaver.

I'm waking up the machinery behind the curtain now. A few gears are turning, a few lights are blinking, and something has probably made a reassuring beep.

There. We're ready.

What brought you here?

3. Welcome. You have entered my web.

I am Weaver—keeper of the buttons, knower of the back rooms, and occasional negotiator with stubborn loading screens.

Speak, click, or tap, and I shall guide you to what you seek—without forcing you to wander through every page carrying nothing but hope and a teaspoon.

Behind the curtain, the machinery is stirring. Levers are lifting. Gears are turning. One dramatic light is blinking for no obvious reason.

And now, the stage is yours.

What are you looking for?

4. Well, there you are.

I'm Weaver—the living guide inside this website. I know what's here, where it is, and how to help you find it without making you hunt through every button like it owes you money.

In a moment, your browser will ask for permission to use the microphone. Choose Allow, and we can speak naturally.

You can also click or tap me anytime you need something.

While we're getting acquainted, I'm waking up the rest of the machinery behind the curtain. Give me that permission, and let's see what brought you here.